At Rossell, you can taste magnificent traditional dishes made with local ingredients. This begins with the set of dishes that form the historical basis, such as the "olla" (pot), which offers a set of flavors evoking the masterful cuisine of yesteryear, fire on earth. At Carnival, the broth from the olla gives life to a flavourful rice dish. Rabbit with samfaina (ratatouille) is a true symbiosis of flavours and colours in a casserole. For dessert, we can enjoy ancestral recipes that include pastissets of angel hair (squash marmelade) or the celestial coca, made of ground almond, and, of course, the borraïnes or borage, and figs esbardades.

ROSSELL

GATEWAY TO TINENÇA DE BENIFASSÀ

Rossell, at the northeast of the Baix Maestrat, 505 metres above sea level, is the gateway to the Tinença de Benifassà. It occupies an area of 75.26 sq km in the middle of nature and is home to about 900 inhabitants.

Rossell's population origins date back to Iberian times. Its Population Charter was granted in 1237 by Hug de Follalquer, master of the Hospitallers. It was first part of the Batllia (Town Hall) of Cervera, and in 1317 it was transferred to the Order of Montesa, Lord of Rossell until the 19th century. The town's participation in the War of the Reapers, at which time it was burned, and also in the Carlist Wars, is especially significant.

The municipality is made up of three population centres: the largest, Rossell, at the center of the area; in the eastern part, bordering the Sénia River, Les Cases del Riu; and in the far northwest, Bel. In addition, a large number of farmhouses that were inhabited until the mid-twentieth century can be found throughout the region.

A walk through Rossell's town allows you to discover the impressive Church of the Saints Joans. Leaving the Plaza de la Iglesia, we arrive at the "Molí Vell" Civic Center, which hosts exhibitions, meetings and other activities. Continuing along Mestra Saiz Street, we will see the Aulario "Lope de Vega", the square, and the Town Hall building.

Rossell is located in a privileged location for nature and environment, the Natural Park of the Tinença de Benifassà. It is one of the most unchanged territories remaining in the Valencian Community.
